

Meet Jacqueline Watty

Jacqueline Watty works in community relations and philanthropic partnerships at Perimeter Institute in Waterloo, ON. She has a passion for sharing humane education within the community and cares about animal welfare, related to both companion animals and those within the food-supply chain. She has been involved with The Humane Society of Kitchener Waterloo & Stratford Perth since 2013, first in humane education, then as a board member, moving up to President, and now as Past-President of the Board of Directors.

Jacqueline lives in Kitchener with her two dogs, husband and two sons. She is a graduate of Leadership Waterloo Region and has been active in other organizations within the tri-cities.

Quote:

As a long time animal welfare advocate it was clear that I wanted to do more to impact the lives of animals in our community and deepen my understanding of the human/animal connection.

Joining the Board of Directors has allowed me to have direct impact on the animals, programming and external lens of the organization. I enjoy working alongside the leadership of the HSKWSP as we work to make decisions that are best for the organization and the long term vision for animal welfare in Canada.
