STRATFORD PERTH HUMANE SOCIETY RECEIVES 18 ANIMALS IN POOR CONDITION

STRATFORD, ONTARIO: The Stratford Perth Humane Society (SPHS) received 17 cats and 1 dog into care this past Monday, after being surrendered by their owner. The animals are needing a little TLC as many have ear mites and fleas, and others need grooming due to matting.

“The animals were surrendered after their owner was admitted to hospital and can no longer care for them,” stated Kathrin Delutis, executive director, The Kitchener Waterloo and Stratford Perth Humane Society (KWSPHS). “It is an unfortunate situation. We are thankful that the family of the owner reached out to us for assistance. This is a large number of animals that many would struggle to care for.”

The animals are currently under medical care and receiving the treatment they need. SPHS estimates that overall care for the group could cost a few thousand dollars, as the animals require veterinary care such as parasite treatment, vaccinations, microchipping and spay/neuter surgeries. A number are also on medication for ear mites and other ailments.

“This is what we do here at the Humane Society, and we couldn’t do it without our community’s support,” stated Nick Burke, senior manager of development, KWSPHS. “If you’d like to help these animals, we would be extremely thankful for your support.”

SPHS hopes that the animals will be ready for adoption in the coming weeks. If you are interested in adopting, please keep an eye on their website as profiles will be posted there.
